Blautopf

One glance is enough: This place has something magical. Blue and green flowing almost incomparable with each other. As if a bright eye from the depths of the earth, source of myths, fairy tales and all sorts of wondrous stories. One of the best is probably the "history of the beautiful Lau," says in the Eduard Mörike, like a mermaid learns to laugh again at the Blautopf. A stone sculpture on the banks remembers it ... and today it should be briefly seen on some days in the depths of the source funnel.

The Blautopf has attracted people from the outset. The first settled in the caves around, the lion man (about 32 000 years) the oldest man-made sculpture or a flute made of swan bones (about 35 000 years) have early testimonies artistic Schaffens. Leuchtet the source yet so many nuances and can so fascinate the people and inspire the cause of the attractiveness of this early settlement area is simply in their fertility. On the barren Albfläche water was a matter of survival - and flowed here and it flows abundantly: 2000 liters pours the source in the second, at peak times even up to 32 000 liters.

The widely branching cave system under the Swabian Alb serves as a sort of natural drains and directs the seeping rainwater from a wide area to karst spring of blue pot, which is 22 meters in depth. 160 square kilometers includes the catchment area. Fahrzeit 1 Std.

Neuschwanstein Castle

Neuschwanstein Castle (German: Schloss Neuschwanstein, pronounced [nɔʏˈʃvaːnʃtaɪn], English: "New Swanstone Castle"[1]) is a nineteenth-century Romanesque Revival palace on a rugged hill above the village of Hohenschwangau near Füssen in southwest Bavaria, Germany. The palace was commissioned by Ludwig II of Bavaria as a retreat and as an homage to Richard Wagner. Ludwig paid for the palace out of his personal fortune and by means of extensive borrowing, rather than Bavarian public funds.

The palace was intended as a personal refuge for the reclusive king, but it was opened to the paying public immediately after his death in 1886.[2] Since then more than 61 million people have visited Neuschwanstein Castle.[3] More than 1.3 million people visit annually, with as many as 6,000 per day in the summer.[4] The palace has appeared prominently in several movies and was the inspiration for Disneyland's Sleeping Beauty Castle[5] and later, similar structures.

The Top of Germany

Jorney time 2 hours

The Zugspitze, at 2,962 m (9,718 ft) above sea level, is the highest peak of the Wetterstein Mountains as well as the highest mountain in Germany. It lies south of the town of Garmisch-Partenkirchen, and the border between Germany and Austria runs over its western summit. South of the mountain is the Zugspitzplatt, a high karst plateau with numerous caves. On the flanks of the Zugspitze are three glaciers, including the two largest in Germany: the Northern Schneeferner with an area of 30.7 hectares and the Höllentalferner with an area of 24.7 hectares. The third is the Southern Schneeferner which covers 8.4 hectares.
